A Look Back...

Defensive Headliner

You would think a team that's leading 48-7 at halftime would lose a little bit of its incentive, a little bit of its drive.

But no way was that going to happen to Nebraska or Mark Daum, Huskers Illustrated's Defensive Player of the Game for his performance in the 62-14 cruise past Kansas State.

"There was a lot of talk in the locker room at halftime. We weren't going to pull another last year's move," said Daum, a senior linebacker from Dix, Neb., and the Huskers' leading tackler this season.

On a day when Kansas State Coach Jim Dickkey praised Nebraska's defense, Daum led the defense.

He led the evenly-distributed Black Shirts with seven tackles. He also intercepted a pass and returned it 14 yards to set up Nebraska's second touchdown on the K-State 13-yard line.

Three plays, Nebraska took a 13-0 lead and the rout was on.

And Daum made sure it stayed on, helping lead the psychological discussions at halftime when Nebraska was in firm command.

Daum, and the rest of the Black Shirts, were determined not to suffer the second-half embarrassment they suffered last year at Kansas State.

Last year, even though the Huskers led, 38-5 at halftime, the Wildcats came back to score 20 straight points and pull within 38-25.

Last year, the Wildcats generated 16 first downs and 259 yards of offense in the second half of a 51-25 loss.

"They hurt us by running the ball in the second half last year," Daum recalled. "They ran right at us."

Mark Daum

This time, there was no way. Of the 190 yards total offense yielded by the Black Shirts, only 53 came on the ground in 39 Wildcat rushing attempts.

Four of Daum's tackles were unassisted. But he was just as proud of his pass interception.

"I was going to cut it back across the field, but I saw there were three or four guys with an angle on me, so I ran to the sideline," Daum said.

According to Daum, NU Linebacker Coach John Melton teaches his players "either to drop like you've been shot or run for the sideline. I chose to run for the sideline," he said.

The thought made Daum smile, something he couldn't do a year ago. "We got embarrassed last year by Kansas State," he said. "I think we probably redeemed ourselves today."

Offensive Headliner

For Nebraska, it was a symbolic play more than anything.

The Huskers passed on the first play of the game and Shane Swanson, the one who caught it, is Huskers Illustrated's Offensive Player of the Game.

Swanson, a senior wingback from Hershey, Neb., led Nebraska receivers with three catches for 51 yards in the Huskers' 62-14 romp over Kansas State. He also returned the second half kickoff 47 yards to set the same tone Nebraska enjoyed en route to a 48-7 first half cushion.

Even though Nebraska only threw 12 passes, two short of its season average, the first pass of the game was meaningful.

"The type of offense we have is based on the run," said Swanson, who snagged the 20-yard aerial from quarterback Travis Turner in the opening seconds.

"But it was good we threw the ball some today because we'll probably need it down the road, and it's bad if you get in a situation where you need it and you haven't practiced it in a game," Swanson said.

According to Swanson, NU Coach Tom Osborne talked about opening the game with a pass during Friday night's team meeting. It all depended on field position.

Turner faked a handoff to I-back Jeff Smith on an isolation play and rolled out. "I slammed the defensive end and went to the flat," said Swanson, who admitted he was "wide open" when K-State's strong safety reacted to the run.

Swanson also caught an 18-yard pass from Craig Sundberg in a 70-yard second-quarter touchdown drive that gave Nebraska a 27-7 lead.

Shane Swanson

His 13-yard catch of another Turner pass was the big play in a short 35-yard touchdown drive that increased the Husker margin to 34-7.

If Kansas State hoped to stage a second-half comeback modeled after last year, Swanson quickly dispelled that thought with his 47-yard return of the second-half kickoff.

Eight plays later, Nebraska scored its eighth touchdown in nine possessions and had a 55-7 lead.

"That kickoff cooled any momentum they might have gotten," offered NU Defensive Coordinator Charlie McBride.

For good measure, Swanson also rushed for eight yards on two carries.

"For the offense, today was something we needed, confidence-wise," said Swanson, who admitted he isn't jumping to any conclusions after Kansas upset Oklahoma.

"It's certainly going to help us out winning the Big Eight and going to the Orange Bowl, but we can't look ahead to that," Swanson said. "We've got to take them one game at a time."

The Training Room

Once again, Nebraska came through a game in good physical condition. And according to NU head trainer and physical therapist George Sullivan, those Cornhuskers who have been injured — offensive tackle Mark Behning and I-back Jeff Smith among them — were able to recuperate while substitutes played against Kansas State.

Wingback Shane Swanson suffered a thigh bruise, but it was nothing serious, Sullivan said.

NU head Coach Tom Osborne held out some hope that I-back Paul Miles, who's been sidelined with a dislocated shoulder, might be able to return to practice this week. Reserve defensive end Brad Smith remains out of action after undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery.

First-team cornerback Neil Harris also could return to action this week.

Scouting Around...

The Opponent....

Two things have happened to Iowa State during this football season. The Cyclones have been riddled with injuries, and yet they've managed to play better against better teams.

Two weeks ago, they nearly beat Oklahoma, finally losing to the Sooners 12-10. Last week, they came from behind to tie Missouri in Columbia, 14-14.

Obviously, Iowa State isn't a team with which to trifle, despite the fact it lost to hapless Colorado, 23-21, and despite its 2-5-1 record.

Most notable of the Cyclones, of course, is All-American Tracy Henderson, the junior split end who caught four passes against Missouri to break Johnny Rodgers' Big Eight Conference career record for receptions.

Henderson goes into the Nebraska game with 55 pass receptions for 824 yards and six touchdowns.

The Cornhuskers won't have to worry about Alex Espinoza, the sophomore quarterback who's thrown most of those passes to Henderson, however.

Espinoza, who led the Big Eight and ranked ninth nationally in passing yardage, suffered a broken ankle in the Missouri game and has been lost for the season. His replacement is junior Alan Hood, who played a key role in the tie.

Hood completed a seven-yard touchdown pass to tight end David Smoldt with 3:59 remaining in the fourth quarter, then threw a two-point conversion pass to Jeff Wodka for the tie.

Hood finished the game with eight completions in 15 attempts for 86 yards.

Like Kansas State, Nebraska's opponent last week, Iowa State has been plagued by injuries. The Cyclones began the season running an I-formation offense, but because of a myriad of injuries to running backs, they've had to go to a variety of alignments.

Tailback Al Watson suffered a broken leg. Derrick Sperling, another tailback, started slowly and then was sidelined by a leg bruise.

As a result, Richard Hanson, a 5-9, 170-pound senior from LaPuente, Calif., has handled most of Iowa State's ball-carrying responsibilities. Hanson had been penciled into the lineup as a split receiver.

The Cyclones have had similar problems at fullback, where Bobby Matthews and Tommy Davis both have been sidelined by injuries, forcing Roger Youngblut into the starting lineup.

Defensively, Iowa State's key performers are linebacker Jeff Braswell, who was picked as the Sports Illustrated national Defensive Player of the Week for his performance against Oklahoma; end Lester Williams; free safety Anthony Mayze; and tackle Barry Moore.

Under head Coach Tom Osborne, Nebraska leads the Iowa State series 9-2, last losing to the Cyclones in 1977, at Lincoln, 24-21. Iowa State also beat the Cornhuskers at Ames in 1976, 37-28.

Jim Criner is in his second season as Iowa State's head coach.

Criner's first experience with Nebraska was a 72-29 loss, the most points ever scored by the Cornhuskers against a Big Eight opponent.

Quotes 'N Notes

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, asked to comment on throwing a pass on the Huskers' first play against Kansas State: "That was the key to victory. If we hadn't thrown that first play, there's no telling what might have happened. We might have lost."

He was being facetious, of course.

Kansas State Coach Jim Dickey, though, was serious with these comments: "Today proves Nebraska is the best team in the league, offensively and defensively. They are the dominant team in the league. With a defense as good as theirs, Oklahoma will have a very difficult time moving the ball."

"When a team can play defense as well as their defense can play right now, I think you can compare them to their really good teams. I don't know how Tom feels about it, but I think you've got a much better shot at winning when you play defense like that. It's really nice to sit over there and watch people stop people and make them punt."

Kansas State kicker Steve Willis said he had a feeling the Wildcats were going to be in for a long day. "I knew we were in trouble when our bus got a speeding ticket on the way to Lincoln Friday night," he said. "I guess I'm a little superstitious, and that definitely wasn't a good omen."

A Kansas State patrolman ticketed the bus for going 73 miles per hour.

The Coaches' Evaluation

Nebraska used 99 players, count 'em, in its 62-14 victory over injury-riddled Kansas State at Memorial Stadium.

Cornhusker head Coach Tom Osborne could hardly be accused of running up the score, something Wildcat Coach Jim Dickey was quick to acknowledge.

"Tom Osborne has been very humane. He was very compassionate," said Dickey.

The facts substantiated Dickey's claim. Nebraska completed its first nine passes, all in the first half, then attempted only three passes during the entire second half.

The Cornhuskers were content to run the ball, and the running plays they chose weren't all that complex.

The game's suspense was short-lived. By the end of the first quarter, Nebraska held a 19-7 lead.

Kansas State won the coin toss and took the wind, a tactical mistake from which the Wildcats never recovered. Nebraska drove 79 yards in 13 plays, with quarterback Travis Turner capping the series with a two-yard touchdown run.

"We've been giving the opposition early encouragement with our own mistakes. This time, it was 19-0 before we gave them much of an opportunity."

The Cornhuskers gave an indication they were going to do things differently on their first play from scrimmage, when Turner teamed with wingback Shane Swanson on a 20-yard pass play.

Nebraska finished the game with 10 pass completions in 12 attempts, an 83.3 percentage. The Big Eight record for completion percentage in a game, set by the Cornhuskers in 1974, is 85.2.

Osborne used six quarterbacks during the game, and 17 players carried the ball at least once, led by Doug DuBose, who rushed for 64 yards in 12 attempts. Fullback Tom Rathman carried 11 times for 57 yards, and freshman I-back Keith Jones gained 54 yards on eight carries.

The Cornhuskers put together an eight-play, 48-yard touchdown drive to begin the second half, and after that the reserves took over.

"I was pleased we could get so much playing time for our second, third and even our fourth-string players. I would say that probably our second unit had as many snaps as our first team, and the third and fourth-unit players had a fair number," said Osborne.

Nebraska finished with 491 yards of total offense while holding Kansas State to 190 yards, 53 of which came on the ground. "I thought our effort was good. I was a little concerned we might come out a little bit flat," Osborne said. "I don't think we were."

A look ahead...

Nebraska vs. Iowa State

THE WAY THEY SEE IT

Buck Turnbull, Des Moines Register: "Obviously, Espinoza breaking his leg maybe changes the complexion of the game a little bit. But I would say even with everybody healthy, Iowa State have trouble keeping it close. I was surprised with the way they played OU, surprised with Missouri, and I'd be equally surprised if they stay within three touchdowns. I would say Nebraska just has too many guns. I don't think it'll be like the Kansas State game. Nebraska 38, Iowa State 10."

Lee Barfknecht, The Omaha World-Herald: "The Cyclone defense turned the corner in the near upset of Oklahoma and the tie with Missouri. But the loss of Alex Espinoza is too big a blow to overcome to have a legitimate shot at Nebraska. Nebraska 30, Iowa State 10."

Chuck Shofner, UPI, Des Moines: "That's the key question, whether they can sustain that emotion. If they play as well as the last two ball games with their defense, I think they can stay with Nebraska somewhat. Offensively it remains to be seen how the loss of Espinoza will affect them, but I'm sure Nebraska will not take them lightly. With Oklahoma losing to Kansas, all Nebraska has to do now is keep winning."

Mark Mathew, WOI, Ames, Iowa: "Nebraska deserves and has earned the respect of everybody in the Big Eight. Year in and year out, they're a tremendous football team. Anybody that hopes to beat them would have to have their best performance of the season."

"I think that Nebraska's offense this year is close to last year's and I know their defense is better than last year. Overall, I would say they are better than last year. On the other hand, Iowa State probably in the past two weeks has been getting as much out of the team with the talent they have that you could ask. They've been playing inspired football."

From week to week as long as I can remember, it's been a game of compensation for whose missing this week.

"I think this week, believe it or not, Alan Hood may be better for the NU game than Alex Espinoza would have been. He's more of a capable scrambler. If his passing game is on, we won't lose anything in that department. If we can play heads up defense, the special teams come through, and get a key field goal here and there, who knows."

"If Nebraska had struggled a little more against Kansas State, I would look for a close ball game. Now, I just don't know."

If we play to the best of our ability and get as fired up for Nebraska as we were for Oklahoma, it might be an interesting afternoon."

THE WAY WE SEE IT

Huskers Illustrated: "Iowa State has gone to the emotional well for two straight weeks and come up with nothing but moral victories in the narrow loss to Oklahoma and the tie with Missouri. Granted, the Missouri tie may have been just enough to keep the emotions floating one more week...had the Cyclones not lost their starting quarterback."

"The first quarter could be the key to this game. If Nebraska can penetrate what has been a stingy Cyclone defense early, the floodgates could be opened. It'll be tough for Iowa State's questionable offense to cause many problems for the Husker defenders. Nebraska 42, Iowa State 17."
